

To whom it may concern.

XM currently does not provide local traffic and weather in my area, if they did I would defiantly tune in on my way to work.

I purchased an XM radio several months ago and enjoy the service they provide.

Living in a rural area my listening choices are very limited and reception is spotty.

The NAB should not be allowed to deny the public access to information.

Anyone with Internet access can check the local news, traffic and weather online, is this not similar?

I pay for Internet access, DirecTV service, XM radio and a newspaper for that matter; all of these forms of media provide entertainment as well as useful and important public information.

The NAB should not be allowed to dictate what I am permitted to hear.
